NEW U.S. SATELLITE WILL BE SEEN HERE

Victorians will be able to see the United States' huge Atlas satellite if the weather co-operates, according to Dr. Andrew McKellar, Dominion Astrophysical Observatory astronomer.

"It will only be seen at dawn or dusk, when the satellite will be in sunshine, but the sky behind it will be dark," he said. "It will appear at about 30 degrees above the horizon at the highest part of its orbit, and almost at the horizon at the lowest."

'I don't think we will see it often," he said. Weather conditions and flight patterns must be

Waring, a professor at the University of Connecticut, added that the air force feat proves the possibility of sending a manned rocket to Mars and back with existing hardware.

In an interview, Waring said the firing could compare with the first step in a program under study by the army to send a manned 32-ton payload to Mars and back.

Waring, who is an adviser to the army scientific advisory panel and a consultant to the navy on solid and liquid propellants, said that a year ago this country was five years behind Russia in missile de velopment, "but this indicates we are catching up rapidly now we're perhaps only two or three years behind."

He added, however, "We've gotten more scientific informa tion from the U.S. satellites than the Russians obtained from theirs."

Toward a Crisis

A NY CITIZEN WHO THINKS, because he is not himself borrowing money, that he can escape the interest-rate policies of the Federal Government should read the evidence taken by the royal commission on British Columbia's power problems.

In their testimony before the commission, officials of the B.C. Power Commission said that the cost of borrowed money was the largest item in any electrical power project.

Any family, in any part of Canada, which uses electricity must pay its share of that capital cost in its monthly electrical bills. And the cost has lately risen to the highest point since 1935, though the present Federal Government promised to reduce it drastically. It may seem a small matter to the ordinary man when the interest rate paid by a public utility rises by a single point—for example, from 3 to 4 per cent. But as the officials say, the increase in interest costs can multiply 17 times in the retail cost of power. No consumer of electricity, large or small, can escape it. (Already the Power Commission's innual costs have been increased by $1,000,000 as a result of higher interest charges.)

The total increase in electrical costs, based on the total borrowings now under way or projected, will be gigantic. While British Columbia's power plans are in confusion at the mo-ment, it is clear that, one way or another, we are borrowing, or are about to borrow hundreds of millions of dollars. The B.C. Electric's capital investment plans alone, for the next year, are reckoned at $95 millions. The Columbia power scheme would run to half a billion or more. The Peace River scheme would be equally or more expensive. The Power Commission is constantly borrowing money.

In every electrical project the consumer and no one else must pay the high interest rate resulting from the Federal Government's huge demands for borrowed money. His power bill, whether he knows it or not, reflects the original cost of

But these costs are not confined to electricity. Among other borrowers, the provincial Toll Bridge Authority has to raise money in the market. So does the P.G.E. Railway, the local school boards, every municipality and many private busi-ness enterprises. In bridge tolls, in railway rates, in school taxes, other municipal taxes or in the ultimate price of goods the cost of money is charged in the end to the average family, directly or indirectly. And that cost is still increasing.

It cannot fail to increase when the Federal Government, borrowing $100 millions a month to cover its yawning deficits, forces up the price of money. Nothing can arrest this upward movement in interest rates (or the fall in bond prices, to state it another way) until the Government borrows less and relaxes its pressure on the money market. Of that there is no sign so far.

Under existing fiscal policies interest rates will soon reach a point where no provincial or municipal government and no private concern will be able to borrow any money at a tolerable rate.

Either that, or the Federal Government will bid up the price of bonds and drive down interest rates by creating a new supply of infla-tionary, printing press money. In the last year the money supply of the nation, mostly in bank credit, has been inflated by about 13 per cent. As a result of this inflation and other factors, the price of all goods has risen about 3 per cent and at that rate the value of all money would be halved within a generation.

The largest question before Canada today is whether the Government will meet the crisis arising from its deficits and borrowings by spending and borrowing less; or by taxing more; or by creating additional money through the banking system.

These great decisions, now being made in Ottawa for announcement in the next budget, may appear to be remote from the average family. They are as close to it, in fact, as the electric light bill, the mortgage payment, the price of groceries.

Disagreement on the Atom

ALTHOUGH AGREEMENT was reached on three clauses of a proposed treaty for protection against surprise nuclear war, the ten-nation conference at Geneva has broken up in failure after six weeks of wrangling. East and West are not yet ready to come to terms on nuclear testing or nuclear attack, even though an earlier conference of experts agreed that a worldwide detection and protective system was feasible.

It had been predicted that when the diplomats took over from the technical authorities the going would be come harder. This has proved to be the case.

The representatives have now recessed for the Christmas season and presumably will convene in January. But it has become fairly that basic differences still prevail between East and West on the atom. A solution apparently must await agreement on broader matters-perhaps nothing less than a settlement of the cold war.

New Left in Italy

A CCORDING TO SENATOR Eugenio Reale, who resigned from one of the top posts of Italy's Communist Party last year, 20,000 Italians are quitting the party every month.

The drift away from doctrine made in Moscow has continued since the revelation of Stalin's crimes and the Soviet suppression of Hungary's revolt.

Until recently these Italian dissidents have wandered in a political wasteland, unwilling to remain within the Communist Party, unable to find political affiliation suited to them.

Now they appear to be coalescing in a new group, the Alleanza Socialista.

The platform of the Alleanza Socialista repudiates the idea of party dictatorship. It affirms the belief that socialism and liberty are inseparable and that democracy is both a method and a way of life as well as an end.

On this general theory the Alleanza Socialista is determined to work to unite all socialists into one party, founded on the ideals of socialism and democracy.

The importance of the development in Italy's political life is emphasized by the disputes proceeding in Pietro Nenni's Italian Socialist Party. Within its ranks are those who urge retention of a working association with their old Communist allies and a rival wing which calls for a clean break.

The new party, believing in personal liberty and democracy, would provide encouragement for the lat-ter. It would strengthen Nenni's position in favor of a break with the Communists, and it could lead to a realignment of political forces ir. Italy, where Socialism still has deep roots, but where the once robust growth of Communism is apparently withering.

Higher and Faster

REMINDER of the problem A facing the Canadian Govern-ment in its decision on whether or not to proceed with production of the Arrow interceptor is given in news from Russia. The Soviets are reported to have already in operation a six-jet intercontinental bomber which flies at twice the speed of sound. That is twice as fast as the best bomber now operational in the United States, although a new one equal in speed to the Russians' is now in the testing stage. The pace of these developments emphasizes the nature of the fighter defence dilemma: whether to concentrate at huge expense on a new interceptor plane, or save the money to produce a still speedier model at a much later date-in the interim remaining relatively undefended. When to this problem is added the complication of unmanned missiles which are planned but not yet an operational reality—the quandary the Government becomes painfully clear.

It is not a problem peculiar to Canada by any means. But Canadian finances are not unlimited. We cannot afford to guess wrong in the defence gamble.

"Come come now Fagan . . . I'm sure they smell as sweet on this side of the fence . . . "

There'll Be No Escape

PERHAPS no other appurtenance of our civilization reflects the true na-ture of our environment more faithfully than the telephone. There it stands: masterpiece of engineering, a miracle of science, an indispensable tool and a fearsome nuisance. We have devised something of almost unimaginable value; we have let it become something of almost unimaginable annoy-ance. Nobody would think of living without a telephone, yet the highest praise you can bestow on a summer resort of We take an instrument that represents the expenditure of years of research, millions of dollars, and the brains of geniuses—and we use it to tell the next-door neighbor that "she sez t' me, she sez, "Who?" an' I tol' her straight, I sez . . ."; or Joe, at the other side of the continent that "it's been fine here, howzit there?

In other words, we take an asset inconceivable in any age previous to our own, a marvel of ingenuity and craft manship, and use it for the most trivial and mediocre of purposes. It is as though we employed our sports model Lincoln to bring home a sack of coal, or a supersonic in plane to transport or a supersonic jet plane to transport

Of course, we do not squander all our telephonic wealth. We often use the contraption to send messages of some im portance. But the general approach to the telephone—by most men, at any rate—is one of hesitancy, reserve and distaste. The first thought of most men on hearing a telephone ringing—unless they are actually waiting for the call-is an involuntary, "Gad, I hope it's not for me. That reaction is partly a surface desire to escape a nuisance, and partly a deep-rooted racial aversion to invasion of personal privacy.

The bell rings, the line is alive.
Who is at the other end? A friend, an enemy, a joker, a bore, a beggar, an un-wanted benefactor, a wrong number?

Countless owners of telephones, caught in a moment of indecision as to whether they will run upstairs downstairs) to answer its call, drop their paintbrush, get out of bed, leave the dishes cooling in the sink, dash in from the garden, come down off a ladder, or come up out of a bathtub—wait, hoping the ringing will cease, and then comfort themselves with the thought that it was probably a wrong number.

For a good many people, all numbers are wrong numbers and themselves with the thought that it was probably a wrong numbers. are wrong numbers, and especially their

Twisted Arm

Now, despite the scarcely concealed horror with which so many folk regard the cradled receiver, we learn that tele phones are going to be made even more dominant in our lives. A note in Mac-lean's Magazine reports that the next development may be a wrist phone the instrument, complete with transistors, will be carried inescapably on one's arm-a slave bracelet if ever

Another "improvement" is said to be the automaic dial. Instead of chasing each number around the rim of the dial, the user will punch buttons for the letters and figures and then put them all into operation with one final master button. Some phones will permit as many as fifty sets of numbers to be thumbed in advance, ready for use by merely hitting the master button. This may make it easier for you to telephone out. But remember it also makes it easier for others to telephone ou. Many a potential caller, at present eterred from calling by the maze of letters and figures that must be man ipulated, will be encouraged to call and call again. And Canadians have again been listed-for the sixth consecutive year-as the world's greatest talkers on the telephone.

Another listed improvement is the electric beam attachment that will per-mit the called party to answer, not by picking up the receiver, but merely by passing a hand through the beam. The genius of the idea, of course, is that the hand may be covered with pastry dough, tar, paint, garden soil or even be holding a wet diaper, and the beam will work just the same. This is progress, of course, but do not forget that with the advent of this device, you will have lost one of your most plausible excuses for not answer ing the phone.

Finally, we are told that we are of the eve of the picture-phone, which will include a two-square-inch screen in which you can see the person who is calling you. As though this were not exciting enough, we learn that the angle of the picture will change automatically-so that the viewer will not become bored with what he is seeing.

There is no indication that this automatic feature will be extended to the transmitter, to give some aid in case we become bored with what we are hearing. That, apparently, must are hearing. That, apparently, must await still further developments—per-

Of the genuine settlers, it is thought that there are now about 60,000 Australians, 35,000 Canadians, over 25,000 South Africans, and at least 10,000 New Zealanders. These estimates represent roughly half a century's migration.

It reached a peak in the post-war decade, and shows little sign of abating. Commonwealth Governments, of course, do nothing to encourage the exodus. Their London representatives, anxious for British brains as well as brawn (see the "public appointments" advertisements in any newspaper), are naturally a little sensitive about the stream of highly educated young people who seek wider fame and recognition, few come here with the firm intention to settle. Their minds have been made up during post-graduate courses, holidays, or by the accident of a war-time posting.

Full employment, high wages, and relatively cheap travel in the white Dominions encourage migration. It is now the thing (less so in Canada) for young people to save £100 or so to visit England. And while most will eventually return home, a residue will remain.

Quietly Done

It has been an inconspicuous in-vasion, as if remote second cousins had quietly taken a house in the next street. It creates no problems or tensions: immigrants from the old Dominions are white, and if they compete, it is for the higher-level job. They are neither "flashy" nor "smart." They draw the line at umbrellas, prefer soft collars to starched, the trilby to the bowler, if they wear a hat at all.

Unless one specialises in national features, it is impossible to pick out an Australian, Canadian, or South African in the tube or in a rush-hour queue. Their accents are unmistakable; and there is no disguising their popularity. Australians cheerfully tell you that everyone likes them.

They are careful to be non-partisan, and the BBC often brings in a Com-monwealth don—there are hundreds to referee a political discussion.

The Australians have been described as the Anglo-Saxon Greeks. Certainly they, and the South Africans, New Zealanders, and Canadians, bristle with ambition. But, then, they would not be here if they were not ambitious.

As one of them said: "We came here for success, not work. You won't find us on the building sites or the buses."

Higher Spheres

Certainly the higher spheres glitter with Commonwealth stars ballet, plasing, teaching, variety, music (both performer and composers), advertising literature, and the stage.

Titles abound. There are the press lords, industrial barons, business lords, industrial barons, business baronets, and academic, medical, and television knights. Of course, not every

Most do ordinary unobtrusive jobs, mainly in the professions, balancing the relatively lower standard of living and high taxation with the compensations of the British way of life.

The asimilados are the industrialist or the Fellow of the Royal Society, the famous choreographer and the humble clerk, and garage mechanic, who mar-ried English girls during the war.

A large segment of the new British prefers its own company. It consists of youngsters who crowd the bed-sitter belts of Kensington, Chelsea, and Fulham. This post-war generation, unlike those who came over in the thirties, left good jobs and comfortable homes rather lower wages and relative

On Their Nerves

Like most Anglo-Saxons abroad, they tend to live on their nerves. They could not stand the strain and loneliness of London for long without the cushions of their own clubs and cultural societies.

Another unassimilated group con-sists largely of writers, artists, and dancers who are either struggling or not quite at the top.

Naturally none of the Commonwealth emigres wants the "open door" slammed in their countrymen's faces. They feel that Britain as the head of the Commonwealth is in a special position, that she can easily absorb colored immigrants without damaging hersocial fabric (an oblique defence of the restrictive laws in the Dominions.)

Apology Sought

In the election reports on amalgamation, in the press, of Wednesday, Dec. Mayor P. Scurrah accused me of making absolute untrue statements to an audience at Lake Hill on Tuesday, Whilst speaking on the amalgamation issue, I referred to a press report of a previous date, and mentioned that according to the report, Mayor Scurrah had the idea that if amalgamation did not take place, that a decay would set in in the high-taxed business section of Victoria. I asked the audience to think that one over.

Mayor Scurrah states it was untrue. He denied making such a statement as was printed in the press column, and shown to him by myself. He said it was

If the Mayor denies making a statement such as is mentioned above, why has it not been contradicted during the past seven weeks? It is only natural that individuals, including the writer be-lieve what we read. ## Good Guys' Are Not Last

WHEN Mollie Charles first started in Spencer's Lending Library, she and her colleagues used to chuckle over a fist of scrambled book titles. It was a sort of occupational joke, A

They relished particularly the incident They relished particularly the which brought to them a woman who hadn't quite caught "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh" and who asked for "Forty Ways to ise a Dog."

I have a certain sympathy for the woman. As my myopic gaze wanders over the pocket books at the newsstand, I find myself assimilating the titles only in part.

The other day I half-saw a book which I think was called "Good Guys Finish Last" or "Nice Guys Don't Win." I should have paid more attention and then I'd know better what I'm talking about. All I did was assume that this was another of the tough and nasty little stories of unethical business in which the sharpies outweasel the decent operators in a triumph of evil. * *

The theme is a familiar distortion of the anti-Horatio Alger touch. It has some value in counter-balancing the modern fairy tale of the good guys' inevitable victories over the bad guys. But it creates its own tiring stereotypes too.

Of course there are people who believe
I almost said honestly, but the adjective is foreign to them—that the important prin-ciple in life is to climb over others, slitting a throat here and there on the way, to what they consider success. They're convinced that "Good Guys Don't Win" and seem to make that an operative principle. In fact they seem to think that being a good guy is a handicap because good guys don't slip in the knife when it could eliminate a com-

"Simpatico," says Webster's New Diction-Second Edition, means "of a nature or taste congenial to one."

Who Gives Most?

NEW YORK-Is the West being "beaten" by the Communist foreign aid offensive? This statement is often made, especially since the Russians announced their offer to help finance the Aswan Dam in Egypt. It's pointed out that Soviet aid is far greater than West ern aid in the United Arab Republic, for example, and in Afghanistan. World development specialists at the United Nations, howver, say that the Russian aid program remains puny beside that of the West, al-though the sales promotion which goes along with it is impressive indeed. It's readily conceded that the Russian pro gram has created a significant impact, but this is largely due to the fact that it was unexpected. It's rather like Samuel Johnson's remark about a dog walking on its hind legs -"Not well done: but you are surprised to find it done at all." As the world becomes accustomed to the rich Russian neighbors, the novelty will wear off and some experts assume that an element of jealousy will eventually take its place, as in the case of American ald. No one knows exactly the size of the Rus sian foreign aid program but Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, the director-general of UN technical assistance, has estimated it at roughly 10 per cent of the Western total. But this is just the beginning of the story. Experts point out that almost all Communist aid is in the form of loans, whereas most Western aid is in outright grants. There is a pro-found difference here which is often over-

British Columbians will be acting in their own interests if they oppose tariff increases, the chairman of MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd., told the annual meeting in Vancouver on Wednesday,

J. V. Clyne said monetary restrictions and tariff barriers are making world trade increasingly difficult for Mac-Millan and Bloedel.

The importance of the for est industry to the general economy cannot be over-emphasized and any change in its fortunes will affect sooner or later every segment of the so cial and industrial life of B.C., he said.

PROFITABLE YEAR

Despite losses caused by market difficulties and strikes the company had a profitable year, Before depreciation it made $19,000,000 compared compared with $17,800,000 last year. MB profits were still well below the 1955-56 levels when prof its before depreciation were between $24 and $25 millions. Shareholders continue to re ceive what Mr. Clyne termed a "meagre increase" in dividends because of the substan tial amount of money-poured into expansion. Directors approved a five cents increase to 25 cents in last quarter dividends.

ANOTHER SLANT

By JIMMY BRESLIN

NEW YORK (NEA) -- The squat kid was wild and awkward. He kept shifting from southpaw to a regular stance and he kept his hands too low. He ran at the tall fellow he was sparring with in crazy rushes.

Ernie Braca, the manager, and Freddy Brown and Whitey Bimstein, the trainers, peered up through the ropes. They all grimaced. They were the only ones watching because the evening snift at Stillman's Gymnasium hadn't started vet. "This is what you get coming to you these days," Ernie

"Where is he from?" Bimstein asked. "A friend of mine from Hartford sent him down," Ernie mused. "Now I got to figure a way to send him back." Then the tall kid threw a short hook to the midsection and the squat kid doubled up and slipped to the floor, both arms wrapped around his middle.

"That's the best thing that could've happened," Brown said as he started into the ring. "Now he don't have to be told to go away. He'll go by himself."

A few minutes later, the kid, who said his name was Tony, hung his head and listened while everybody assured him he had looked fine. But you could tell by his look that he understood everybody wished he would take the next bus

Then Braca walked out onto Eighth Avenue and down to the restaurant he makes headquarters out of and he was talking about the prospects a fight manager has to look at these

Would-Be Pugs Get Wrong Slant

"Now I have Tony Anthony and say what you will he's one of the few names left around, so everybody comes to me with a fighter," he mused. "You saw this one here? He's way better than most I've seen. I think the fights they put on television got something to do with it. They use fighters so terrible that any ordinary kid watching says to himself, 'If this bum is in there, I can make it.'

"The coest is the only place where it's different. There's nothing around here. We were in Milwaukee to fight this Orville Pitts and I took a look around the Golden Gloves Gym there and they don't have a fighter in the joint.

"I look just from habit. Because if you do find a fighter all it does is cost you. Look at Anthony. Remember he had me? That was two years ago, I'm still in the red.

"We get $7,500 for Pitts—and I got the money, too—so the afternoon I came back from checking the bank to make sure the cheque cleared, I come into the back room and I have people waiting.

"You got to see each one of them. Legitimate managers," guys who always made a living for the fighter and them-selves, they're starving. I'm paying gas bills and rent and dinner money for these guys. What are you going to do?

"The best thing I can do is get to the coast. We'll fight Cal Brad in Los Angeles, perhaps. Then maybe we'll get an another TV shot. After that, who knows? If we could stay out there and fight Machen in San Francisco and then take Folley in Los Angeles it would be great.

"Look at Al Weill. He went out there and I read where Kay Starr throws a cocktail party for him. Back here I come into the place at cocktail time and I got three guys waiting

NEW YORK (UPI) -With the college court season barely under way, Oscar Robertson of Cincinnati and Bob Boozer of Kansas State already have All-America honors locked up today but the race for the other three spots appears wide open.

The amazing item, if you ook back on collegiate baskethall of just a decade ago, is the ous overall increase in height of the college kids. Rare is the team which doesn't have a growing boy of six feet, six inches and they go right on up the seven-foot stratosphere.

Which means that a boy has to be more than merely tall to get the attention that such height formerly gained automatically.

Robertson and Boozer aren't midgets, by a long shot. The "Wonderful O" from Cincinnati is six feet, five inches. Boozer, who was good enough last year to beat out Wilt (The Chamberlain as the Big Eight's player of the year, is six feet, eight inches tall.

Pee Wee starred in seven world series for the Dodgers, dating back to 1941, and played in eight all-star games, streching over a period from 1942 to 1953, and he was selected for the 1954 squad.

He replaced another famous old Brooklyn Bum, Leo Durocher, as shorstop and neither time nor talent could force him out of the job until njuries sidelined him in 1957.

He appeared in 69 games here last season, batting .224. But the cold figure tells little. Pee Wee himself joked about his advancing years, and yenned to be 21 again. But his very presence in the lineup invariably provided a morale boost for the Dodgers.

Le Petit', the Driving Force at Fort Langley

Birtoria Baily Times FRIDAY, DEC. 19, 1958

provided for members of Uni Leechman was anthropologist with the National Museum of Canada, and recently directed the centennial year. His topic was James Murray Yale, in charge of Fort Langley for nearly 30 years from 1828, and who, because of his small stature, was Yale" all his days.

Dr. Leechman outlined the founding of Fort Langley in 1827, when the Hudson's Bay Company realized that they would probably lose their Fort Vancouver on the Columbia after the boundary was finally settled. He described how, in the autumn of 1828, Sir George Simpson arrived at the fort by canoe, wearing a top hat and preceded by his personal piper, and with him came the young man Yale, who was to spend the rest of his life in the Pa-cific coast territory.

GREAT AMBITION

"Yale's dream and ambition said Dr. Leechman, "was to make Fort Langley superior in every way to the thriving Fort Vancouver. He started a salmon salting industry, even producing the salt and making the barrels to pack the salmon in; built up great wheat and cattle and lumber markets, a $12,000 a year business in cranberries, and even tried his hand at making caviar, shipping many of these things to Hawaii and even to China and Southeast Asia." After Fort Victoria was built Fort Langley's fortunes began to wane. After 1858, when British Columbia was pro-claimed a Crown Colony at Langley, Yale retired and came in Victoria to live, first at Royal Oak and later at Portage Inlet. In 1870 he was badly mauled by a bear and never recovered fully, dying the folwing year.

Police Hide Missing Bride 'Informer'

VENTURA, Calif. (AP)-An elderly woman who identified a key figure in the baffling bara bride was hidden away by police today at her own re-

Mrs. Emma Short, 80, asked for police protection Thursday after naming Frank Winter-stein, 25, of Santa Maria, as the man who took part in the fake annulment of the missing bride, Olga Kupczyk Duncan.

A complaint charging Win-terstein with perjury and forgery was issued, along with a warrant for his arrest.

Mrs. Short was described as friend of Mrs. Elizabeth Ann Duncan, 54, mother-in-law of Olga. Mrs. Duncan is in jail, charged with forgery, perjury and falsification of documents. Police say she masqueraded as the bride in the annulment pro-ceedings last August.

The bride, a 30-year-old Canadian nurse, has not been seen since Nov. 17. Authorities fear she may have been kid-napped and slain.

Baby Sacrifice Without Success

BRIGHTON, England (AP) Brighton police reported today they have found nothing to support a story that a baby was used as a Hallowe'en night sacrifice during black magic ceremonies here.

Detectives combed this sea side resort checking the story. An author who specializes in occult and witchcraft subjects startled a public meeting with it two nights ago.

Jackie Gleason Offers Musical Tribute to Dorsey Brothers at 7.30

By PHIL LEE, Times TV Editor

Although doubtless their intentions were of the most honorable those taking part in the debate, especially newspaper editor Ross Munro and American for Quentin Reynolds who wrote "Dress Rehearsal for Invasion," sounded like enthusiastic amateurs walking $1.10 the halls of professional military strategists.

What they said or didn't say couldn't matter one way or the other. At least Reynolds was frank about this, prefacing almost all his remarks with "Of course

. What matters-and all that matters is that two men of the highest ranks, overall allied commander The management and staff wish Jou all a General Dwight D. Eisenhower and Britain's skilful Lieut.-Gen. Sir Brian Horricks have both stated that those who gave their lives in the Dieppe raid died not in vain. Through their sacrifices the great and successful invasion of Normandy was carried out with the minimum of losses. What had been learned at such great cost of Canadian lives at Dieppe had not been forgotten in establishing the new front in France.

One must believe such men as Eisenhower and Sir Brian. For they are the experts. Those who lost their loved ones at Dieppe will want to believe them. That is all that matters, that something was learned by it all.

Through their deaths others lived.

SPEAKING PERSONALLY I could see no reason for rehashing the raid. It is now 16 years over with, a paragraph on the page of history. All it did was serve to open up old wounds and old memories at a season of the year when memories are at their most vunerable. What's more, hindsight never won a single known battle.

As for foresight, I often wonder if science should provide us all with a crystal ball with which to glimpse the future whether man would ever pick up his arms again.

Who would have thought just 13 years ago that that old foe Germany would be our ally, that an ally upon whom we depended so much for our victory, the Russians, would be a suspected foe, that the son of a Japanese emperor would be wined, dined and feted while those from the camps at Hong Kong still lay in their sick beds.

Oh I know this sort of ridiculousness has been going on since time began but you'd think by now we'd be thoroughly fed up and do something about it. Who knows, maybe, someday, we will?

Everett, alias Herbert Ed wards, is charged with the at tempted fraud Nov. 5 of $1,590 from Gordon Cumming, 555 Whiteside. There is a second charge against the accused, he defrauded Leonard Bieller, 3821 Ascot, of $1,590 on Oct. 22.

Both involved hot nut vend ing machines purported to be sold through an agent by Canadian Trading Co., Winnipeg.

The witnesses said Edwards John Foster Dulles expressed indicated to them they would have exclusive territorial rights to the machines pur-chased, even though they all lived in the same area. In this Thursday's session two unemployed Nanaimo men told how they had agreed with the accused, known to them as Simpson, to buy 20 vendors each, also at $1,590.

In the one case, that of Norman Woodhall, the accused had told him he could expand to Port Alberni and Duncan, and that after 12 months if he wanted to ge out of the business he could get his money back.

CONTRACT SCANNED

The witness said the ac cused talked constantly while he was reading the contract "I didn't read it as well as I should.'

Woodhall said he received letters from a man who signed himself Gerald Elliott at Canadian Trading Co., first congrat-ulating him that he was chosen to handle the machines and acknowledging receipt of his money, and later apologizing for delay in shipping the fourth letter saying he could not cancel the contract.

Ah, the meliow mindness of a good medium Cheddar—the delicate nutry flavour of Swiss Emmenthal, matured till the surface of the "eyes" is just moist, the aroma of Limburger, the authority of a wellaged Stilton!

aged Stilton:
Are you still with us? Is your mouth watering? Then, dear reader, you are indeed a lover of cheese, and worthy to be introduced to the Aladdin's cave of treasure which is better known by the name of EAT-ON'S cheese counter. Let us not waste precious space on a ON'S cheese counter. Let us not waste precious space on a recital of the cheeses you'd expect to find—cheeses noble in their own way, but common to many a store. Such things as processed Canadian, Ontario Cheddar, Philadelphia cream cheese are delightful; but here and now we aim to tell you of what is different among the 136* varieties of cheese at EATON'S.

*We counted them—it's true!

Names and Places

Always confusing when dis-cussing cheese. Is it right that Gorgonzola only comes from Northern Italy—and Edam only from Holland? To the Northern Italy — and Edam only from Holland? To the purist, that's so but let's be a little more broadminded, and consider Gorgonzola from Denmark. It has the same sharp flavour, the same rich blue-veined appearance. You'll find it selling by the piece, for 1.25 lb. Close by, there's Danish Blae—whiter in appearance, sharper in flavour, packed in convenient plastic tubs or boxes, or in the piece at 91c lb. While on the blue-veined cheese, why not a taste of Stilton—king of them all? You can buy either the 1-lb. earthenware crock at 3.25, or pieces of various sizes for 1.39 lb. The crock makes a fine gift—the recipient can wine-cure it to his own taste.

Wine-Cured,

Did You Say?

We did indeed. For those of you with neither the time, the patience (nor the wine!) to cure your own, we offer wine-cured Cheddar heart, made by Borden (a 3 lbs. 6 ozs. heart costs only 5.25), or a German Emmenthal with Moselle wine. This comes foil wrapped in a delightful little wooden box, a 4-oz. package for a mere 25c. We hesttate to recommend this as a stocking filler, but it would make a nice extra touch for a gourmet!

With wine goes, very often, smoke, and believe it or not, you'll find smoked cheese at smoke—and believe it or not, you'll find smoked cheese at EATON'S. This is an 8-oz block of Cherry Hill process cheese, carefully and slowly smoked so that the flavour permeates the whole block. You'll find it only at EATON'S—for a mere 49c how can you resist an 3-oz. piece? Cheese as a Gift?

Well, why not? We're not suggesting that you buy a ½-lb, wedge of Cheddar and pop it under the tree (at the last moment, naturally—keep refrigerated even after giftwrapping) but there are a number of fancy cheeses that would be welcomed by anyone with an educated palate. How about a cheese heart, for example? The heart of a cheese matures better, has a fuller, richer flavour, and a finer appearance too. You could be a very popular Santa with the aid of a 5-lb. Black Diamond Cheddar heart, which comes ready packed in a handsome gift box for only 4.95. Something a little smaller, perhaps? There's a neat little 4-oz. box of Danish Lion cream cheese spread, three foilcheese spread, three foil-wrapped packages in flavours of mushroom, celery and "cocktail." Don't ask us what cocktail is in it—try some and see if you want to be the cocktail of the cocktail of the cocktail is in it—try some and see if you want to be the cocktail is in it—try some and see if you want to be the cocktail is in it—try some and see if you want to be the cocktail is in it—try some and t see if you can identify it!

Space Shortage

Here we are, running out of space, and dozens of cheeses left unmentioned. Just to give you some idea of the selection, we'll list a few. From England, there's Wensleydale, Cheshire or Lancashire—also Caerphilly, which is really a Welsh cheese, here's Camembert in tins (just the right ripeness) or in boxes here's Camembert in tins (just the right ripeness) or in boxes, Oka flown in specially for us from Quebec, Sweetie Primost, a sweetened cheese that the children will love, Mozzarella and Scamorze for pizza, Gouda, Gjetost, Danbo, Port Salut, Nokyelost, Tilsit. Sapsago, Provalone, Romano, Roque-fort, goat's milk cheese, Sardo, Limburger, Parmesan, Petit Carre—sorry, no more space— you'll have to come and see them all for yourself!

Waring, who is an adviser to the army scientific advisory panel and a consultant to the navy on solid and liquid propellants, said that a year ago this country was five years behind Russia in missile de velopment, "but this indicates we are catching up rapidly now we're perhaps only two or three years behind."

Good Guys' Are Not Last

WHEN Mollie Charles first started in Spencer's Lending Library, she and her colleagues used to chuckle over a list of scrambled book titles.

It was a sort of occupational joke. patron would come in with half an idea of a novel's name and the people in the library would try to identify the book for the pros-

They relished particularly the incident which brought to them a woman who hadn't quite caught "The Forty Days of Musa Dagh" and who asked for "Forty Ways to Amuse a Dog."

I have a certain sympathy for the woman As my myopic gaze wanders over the pocket books at the newsstand, I find myself assimilating the titles only in part. The other day I half-saw a book which I think was called "Good Guys Finish Last" or "Nice Guys Don't Win." I should have paid more attention and then I'd know better what I'm talking about, All I did was assume that this was another of the tough and nasty little stories of unethical business in which the sharpies outweasel the decent operators in a triumph of evil. * The theme is a familiar distortion of the anti-Horatio Alger touch. It has some value in counter-balancing the modern fairy tale of the good guys' inevitable victories over the bad guys.

stereotypes too. But it creates its own tiring

Of course there are people who believe I almost said honestly, but the adjective is foreign to them—that the important prinlife is to climb over others, slitting a throat here and there on the way, to what consider success. They're convinced "Good Guys Don't Win" and seem to make that an operative principle. In fact they seem to think that being a good guy is a handicap because good guys don't slip in the knife when it could eliminate a competitor.

It's a pretty depressing philosophy.

That's one side of the balances. It's a lot more encouraging to look at the other. On the positive side are hosts of people who find a certain success in life just by making living a little easier for others. And one of the refinements in that pursuit is a conscious effort to help without making those who are helped feel resentfully in

The Christian Science Monitor has re-cently published an interesting piece on efforts now under way to make Americans

"simpatico" overseas.
"Simpatico," says Webster's New Dictionary, Second Edition, means "of a nature or taste congenial to one."

In other words our neighbors, facing a terrific job in international relations, want more good guys to go abroad to make favor-able impressions where unfavorable ones exist and thereby prove that good guys do

"Just how," asks the Monitor writer, does one go about training North Americans for overseas posts so they don't turn out to be unrepresentative of the highest ideal to which Americans aspire?

"How does one select North Americans intending to work in Latin America so they don't flaunt their flashy big cars in front of nationals too poor even to own a donkey or a bullock?

"Or how does one avoid choosing Americans who, not being particularly simpatico, use their developed language skills to the point of being 'fluently arrogant'?"

The answer seems to lie in the selection of individuals who have been decent, polite and considerate at home. In other words, "nice guys."

And they are needed, argues the Monitor article, to win the minds of men not committed to the rival ideology

You prepare people for this task, in the opinion of Mr. Rollin Atwood, an executive of the United States' International Cooperation Administration, by providing the basic education that fits a person for effective citizenship at home. You make him a fair to average good guy with a trained intelligence that below him to be a second control of the second control telligence that helps him to be simpatico, because, contrary to the book title I can't remember clearly, you're counting on him to

Who Gives Most?

by the Communist foreign aid offensive? This statement is often made, especially since the Russians announced their offer to help finance the Aswan Dam in Egypt. It's pointed out that Soviet aid is far greater than West-ern aid in the United Arab Republic, for example, and in Afghanistan. World development specialists at the United Nations, howaid program remains puny beside that of the West, al-ever, say that the Russian though the sales promotion which goes along with it is impressive indeed. Burke

It's readily conceded that the Russian pro gram has created a significant impact, but this is largely due to the fact that it was un-expected. It's rather like Samuel Johnson's remark about a dog walking on its hind legs

"Not well done: but you are surprised to find it done at all." As the world becomes accustomed to the rich Russian neighbors, the novelty will wear off and some experts assume that an element of jealousy eventually take its place, as in the case of American aid. No one knows exactly the size of the Russian foreign aid program but Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, the director-general of UN technical assistance, has estimated it at roughly 10 per cent of the Western total. But this is just the beginning of the story. Experts point out that almost all Communist aid is in the form of loans, whereas most Western aid is in outright grants. There is a profound difference here which is often over-

The noted British economist, Dr. Peter Wiles, has written an analysis in which he says that Western loans, both public and nercial, should be included in the foreign aid total.

There is no substantial difference between a private and a public when socialist and capitalist countries are being compared—it is essential to include both," he said. "If 'foreign aid' can mean such extremely different things as a United States outright gift and a Soviet loan at 1 per cent, it must certainly include the Soviet loan's first cousin, a Swiss loan at 6 per cent He also points out that the International Bank and the International Monetary Fund operate exclusively on Western money and thus their transactions with the under-developed countries must be included on the Western side. Thus he adds up Western grants and loans and comes up with this summary:

Outright grants by Western nations and intermediary organizations $1.35 billion. Outright grants by USSR and satellites-

Loans by Western nations $800 million. Loans by Communist nations $370

Western loans are thus over twice as great, Western grants are over a thousand times as great.

This is an over-simplified summary of Dr. Wiles complex analysis but it gives an indication of the scope of the programs. The analysis, believed the first of its kind, is mainly based on 1955 figures and the author points out that this covers only the first 12 months of serious Communist foreign aid when he assumes that the Communist foreign aid "pipeline" was not yet full. On the other hand, the Western nations, are making a major new effort in foreign aid and this will tend to counter-balance the growing Soviet program.

Dr. Wiles concludes by suggesting that Communist aid should be welcomed even if the ultimate aim is "world conquest." "It helps to relieve human need," he said,

"and in the long run will probably have no political effect at all—as the Middle East, and above all Syria, demonstrate what hap pened in Syria when the Communist a vances got too fast and furious. The country handed itself over to Nasser, Communism's most effective enemy, who suppressed the

At Tariffs

British Columbians will be acting in their own interests if they oppose tariff increases, the chairman of MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd., told the annual meeting in Vancouver on Wednesday.

J. V. Clyne said monetary restrictions and tariff barriers are making world trade increasingly difficult for Mac-Millan and Bloedel,

The importance of the for est industry to the general economy cannot be over-emphasized and any change in its fortunes will affect sooner or later every segment of the social and industrial life of B.C., he said.

PROFITABLE YEAR

Despite losses caused by market difficulties and strikes, the company had a profitable year. Before depreciation it made $19,000,000 compared with $17,800,000 last year. MB the 1955-56 levels when profits before depreciation were between $24 and $25 millions.

Shareholders continue to receive what Mr. Clyne termed a "meagre increase" in dividends because of the substantial amount of money poured into expansion. Directors approved a five cents increase to 25 cents in last quarter divi-

Ah, the mellow mildness of a good medium Cheddar—the delicate nutty flavour of Swiss Emmenthal, matured till the surface of the "eyes" is just moist, the aroma of Limburger, the authority of a wellaged Stilton!

aged Stilton:
Are you still with us? Is your mouth watering? Then, dear reader, you are indeed a lover of cheese, and worthy to be introduced to the Aladdin's cave troduced to the Aladdin's cave of treasure which is better known by the name of EAT-ON'S cheese counter. Let us not waste precious space on a recital of the cheeses you'd expect to find—cheeses noble in their own way, but common to many a store. Such things as processed Canadian, Ontario Cheddar, Philadelphia cream cheese are delightful; but here and now we aim to tell you of what is different among the 136° varieties of cheese at EATON'S. EATON'S.
* We counted them—it's true!

Names and Places

Always confusing when discussing cheese. Is it right that Gorgonzola only comes from Northern Italy—and Edam only from Holland? To the purist, that's so—but let's be a little more broadminded, and consider Gorgonzola from Denmark. It has the same sharp flavour, the same tangy scent, the same rich blue-veined appearance. You'll find it selling by the piece, for 1.25 lb. Close by, there's Danish Bluewhiter in appearance, sharper in flavour, packed in convenient plastic tubs or boxes, or in the piece at 91c lb. While on the blue-veined cheese, why not a taste of Stilton—king of them ail? You can buy either the 1-lb. earthenware crock at 3.25, or pieces of various sizes for 1.39 lb. The crock makes. 3.25, or pieces of various sizes for 1.39 lb. The crock makes a fine gift—the recipient can wine-cure it to his own taste.

Wine-Cured, Did You Say?

We did indeed. For those of you with neither the time, the patience (nor the wine!) to cure your own, we offer wine-cured Cheddar heart, made by Borden (a 3 lbs. 6 ozs. heart costs only 5.25), or a German Emmenthal with Moselle wine. This comes foil-wrapped in a delightful little wooden box, a 4-oz. package for a mere 25c. We hesitate to recommend this as a stocking filler, but it would make a nice extra touch for a gourmet!

With wine goes, very often,

With wine goes, very often, smoke—and believe it or not, you'll find smoked cheese at EATON'S. This is an 8-oz. block of Cherry Hill process cheese, carefully and slowly smoked so that the flavour permeates the whole block. You'll find it only at EATON'S—for a mere 49c how can you resist an 8-oz. piece?

Cheese as a Gift?

Well, why not? We're not suggesting that you buy a ½1b, wedge of Cheddar and pop it under the tree (at the last mounder the tree (at the last moment, naturally—keep refrigerated even after giftwrapping) but there are a number of fancy cheeses that would be welcomed by anyone with an educated palate. How about a cheese heart, for example? The heart of a cheese matures better, has a fuller, richer flavour, and a finer appearance too. You could be a very popular Santa with the aid of a 5-lb. Black Diamond Cheddar heart, which comes ready packed in a handsome gift box for only 4.95. Something a little smaller, perhaps? There's a neat little perhaps? There's a neat little toz. box of Danish Lion cream cheese spread, three followrapped nackages in flavours of mushroom, celery and "cocktail." Don't ask us what cocktail is in it—try some and see if you can identify it!

Space Shortage

Here we are, running out of space, and dozens of cheeses left unmentioned. Just to give you some idea of the selection, we'll list a few. From England, there's Wensleydale, Cheshire or Lancashire—also Caerphilly, which is really a Welsh cheese, here's Camembert in tins (just here's Camembert in tins (just the right ripeness) or in boxes, Oka flown in specially for us from Quebec, Sweetie Primost, a sweetened cheese that the children will love, Mozzarella and Scamorze for pizza, Gouda, Gjetost, Danbo, Port Salut, Nokkelost, Tilsit, Sapsago, Provalone, Romano, Roque-fort, goat's milk cheese, Sardo, Limburger, Parmesan, Petit Carre—sorry, no more space— you'll have to come and see them all for yourself!
